The Brooklyn Eagle; "Here we have Carlyle at his best — 400 letters all scintillating with graphicalness and very full of that man Carlyle."

The Atlantic Monthly: "Of the detailed chat about his plans and his work, there is much, and none too much. Of general matter, as purely literary, as purely the fruit of his genius as anything which he wrote to be printed, there is a great deal."

The New York Times Saturday Review: "We cannot but believe that these letters will renew for many readers their old pleasure in Carlyle ;
if they should raise up for him a host of new readers it would not be strange."

The Dial, Chicago: "The best possible life of Carlyle — best because self-told."

The New York Evening Post: "At times his heart went out in tenderness, and his letters to Jane and to others are filled with exquisite love and simple sweetness such as no other letters of the language can parallel."

The New York Times Saturday Review: " Varied and
entertaining,
the ' New Letters and Memorials of Jane Welsh Carlyle' will be widely read and discussed."

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY says: " A most valuable work, supplying as it does the real (though indirect) history and personality of a character as generally loved for her womanly graces as admired for her brilliant gifts of mind. Accept my congratulations upon your giving to the book world such a treasure."

The Churchman, New York : * < We find ourselves at the end of the second volume wishing for more, loth to let this entertaining, gossipy friend go into silence."

Jrgonaut, $m Francisco: "The letters abundantly bear out Mrs.

Carlyle*s well-established reputation as a born correspondent, -- as a born letter-writer."
